

Sophie Alexander

Sophie Alexander is an obstetrician and an epidemiologist. She is emeritus professor of the School of Public Health of Université Libre de Bruxelles (ULB).

Sophie studied medicine, then graduated in Ob-Gyn at ULB. She then enjoyed a year in Oxford which led her after she came back to gain a Master's in Public Health at ULB.

Since then, and always in the field of reproductive health she has enjoyed a mixed activity, as clinician, as scientist and as counsellor for government. An enthusiastic Europhile, she has had the privilege of participating in various European and international projects including EUROPERISTAT since its inception. The topic of better assessment and management of severe maternal conditions has been of interest to her since many years.